Our spiritual identity crisis

Susie Larson on December 15, 2017

Identity theft is a serious concern for many as it can cause long term financial damage. However, how often do we consider our spiritual identity?

Prayer intercessor Rosey Brausen says that the most important identity we have is our identity in Christ. However, it's also the identity many know little about.

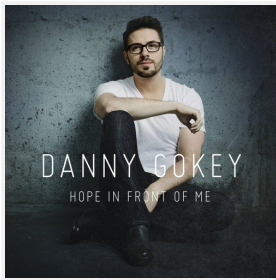

"The burden on my heart right now is the lack of understanding of our identity in Christ."

Rosey references a quote from Graham Cook that says Jesus knows who we are and Satan knows who we are. We're the only ones who are confused.

"It's that lack of identity of our citizenship of what God actually died for that breaks my heart. People will come in and ask for prayer, and I say, 'you've already won that battle, do you realize that? Satan is such an enemy that if he could have taken you out already he would have.' So the fact that you're in my office asking for prayer tells me that you're already victorious. Let's stand in that and kick the rest of it."
